

Absolutely. I would say without a doubt that the Hand-to-Hand Combat Course put on by USDSA should be a yearly requirement for all departments. The training is very relevant, well presented, and excellently demonstrated. The class gives a good solid block of the most likely to be used strikes, blocks, and ground fighting techniques a street officer should know. The instructors are also very approachable, helpful, and hard-working. Even as a Chief, I enjoy taking this class yearly and feel it's relevant for my position to understand and experience hand-to-hand combat.

Thanks again and hope that helps!
